Introduced five years ago as an advanced idea in automobile construction and successfully operated since then by thousands of enthusiastic owners, the Owen Magnetic is now entering the greatest year of its history.

The finest engineering and manufacturing methods and adequate production are assured in 1920, the Owen Magnetic having acquired a great plant of its own in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where the International Fabricating Corporation is located, whose precision engineers, makers of the famous "Sunbeam" aeroplane engine, are concentrating exclusively on the production of the Owen Magnetic.
